This publication lists watch groups and brands from all over the world. I started this project for myself to keep a list of watch/clock brands for my consultation. Even though there are some lists already available on the net I decided to create one from scratch.

The goal was to make it as complete as possible containing for every brand the logo, the URL and the headquarters' country. Soon I realized that the data collected might be useful to other watch enthusiasts so I decided to graphically polish the layout and publicly share it.

Are every active brands on the planet listed here? No, I'm sure there are other brands that I'm not aware of. I guess it's impossible to create a complete list, especially for an one-man task like this.

Still, it's a rich inventory spanning from established industrial brands to "Haute Horlogerie", from independents to micro brands and the so-called fashion brands (don't shoot the messenger, please – they exist regardless the opinions of watch aficionados 😊).

It was quite a demanding production: 5 months of work gathering and checking logos, digging the company informations (more on this later), sorting the data, setting a layout navigation, etc.

The navigation is self explanatory: the top Kron logo always points to the table of contents with links to the various sections. URLs open in the external browser. Brands in the Watch Groups section point to the specific brand. The top alphabet in the Watch Brands section points to the chosen letter subsection. Red highlighted brands have, at the time of publishing, an issue with their website loading.

It's remarkable how a relatively niche market like watches is so lively and rich. It amaze me how many brands exist and the amount of watches continuously introduced throughout the year.

A little personal rant: the countries indicate where the companies have their legal headquarters. It doesn't necessarily match with the manufacturing country. Many brands don't provide clearly where they're based. Often I had to dig in their website terms and conditions or turn to chambers of commerce or similar trade lists to get the information. Is it so difficult to clearly state where are a company is run? Are owners ashamed to tell where are their headquarters located? More transparency would be welcome, in my opinion.

I'm Marco Klobas, an Italian graphic designer fascinated, among other things, by timepieces. This guide is shared on my website www.marcoklobas.net and carries the Kron logo I use to tag my timepieces-related contents.

My contacts are available as well to get in touch with me in order to report a typo/error, to add/remove/update a brand or to provide any other feedback. The publishing date is on the back cover. I'd try to update the PDF from time to time if new informations are collected.

I hope you'll find this guide useful and convenient to browse.
